Teacher Key and Suggested Responses

Equivalent accurate answers should also receive credit.

Parts One to Three

Objective answer blanks have been filled directly in the booklet tables above.

Part Four: Suggested Responses

1. Covenant in Judaism is a sacred relationship between God and a people, especially Israel. It involves promise, identity, and responsibility, so faith is linked with obedience, memory, and communal life.
2. Abraham is significant as an early figure of covenant, faith, and ancestral identity. He is remembered as a forefather whose relationship with God helps ground Jewish self-understanding.
3. Moses and the Exodus remain central because they tell the story of liberation from slavery and the receiving of the law. This story shapes Jewish identity, worship, ethics, and festivals such as Passover.
4. The Torah is the central body of teaching and law. The Tanakh is the Hebrew Bible as a whole, including Torah, Prophets, and Writings. The Talmud is a large body of rabbinic discussion and interpretation of Jewish law and tradition.
5. The synagogue is a place for prayer, study, teaching, and community life. A rabbi serves as a teacher and spiritual leader who interprets tradition and guides the community.
6. Sabbath matters because it sets apart sacred time for rest, worship, family, and holiness. It reminds Jews that life is not only work and that time itself can be dedicated to God.
7. Kosher practice shows that everyday actions, even eating, can be shaped by holiness and discipline. It communicates that Jewish identity is lived out in daily habits, not only in special ceremonies.
8. Passover remembers the Exodus from Egypt and God's liberating action. Through the seder and retelling, each generation is invited to remember freedom, covenant, and identity as if it were personally involved.
9. Yom Kippur is a solemn observance centered on repentance, fasting, forgiveness, and atonement. Hanukkah is a festival of lights linked with rededication and historical memory. They express different moods and kinds of religious remembrance.
10. Mitzvot are commandments or good deeds that shape daily life. Accept any two accurate examples, such as keeping Sabbath, giving charity, honoring parents, eating kosher, or practicing justice and mercy.
11. Diaspora means the dispersal of Jewish communities across many lands. It shaped Jewish history by requiring communities to preserve identity, memory, law, and worship while adapting to many different societies.
12. Accept any accurate Canadian example, such as Jewish schools, synagogues, charities, museums, scholarship, arts, civic leadership, or the visible role of Jewish communities in Canadian pluralism.

Part Five: Student-Choice Teacher Notes

Option A: Jewish Holy Day or Symbol Study

Responses will vary. Full-credit work identifies one Jewish holy day, symbol, or ritual object, describes it accurately, explains what beliefs, memories, or values it communicates, shows how it links identity across generations, and includes at least two credible sources.

Option B: Jewish Community in Canada

Responses will vary. Award full marks when the student identifies one real Canadian Jewish community, institution, museum, neighbourhood, or historical event, describes it clearly, explains how Jewish life is visible in it, notes one contribution to Canadian society or pluralism, and cites at least two credible sources.
