

SLIDE DECK 8:
Fact vs Opinion and Journalism

What is a fact?

What is an opinion?

A fact is something that is known or proven to be true.

An opinion is a view or judgment formed about something, not necessarily based on fact or knowledge.

Fact vs. Opinion

Fact:

An apple is a fruit.

Opinion:

Apples are delicious.

What is journalism?

Journalism involves the gathering, evaluating and presenting of news and information to the public.

Fact-based journalism: Purpose is to inform.

Focuses on reporting on issues and events. While it may include analysis or assessment, it is based on facts, not opinion.

Opinion journalism: Purpose is to criticize, praise, interpret or persuade.

An opinion piece provides a viewpoint about an issue or event. It may not be neutral or balanced. Examples include editorials, columns and commentary.

BREXIT

British MPs reject Johnson's first bid to call snap October election

Labour Leader Jeremy Corbyn said he would agree to hold an early election once the upper house of parliament passes a bill that would prevent Britain from leaving the EU on Oct. 31 without a deal

OPINION

Boris Johnson's Brexit plan comes at a terrible time for the British economy

ERIC REGULY

OPINION

In the Brexit mess, where does the will of the British people truly lie?

TRANS MOUNTAIN

Court allows legal challenge against Trans Mountain just as construction resumes on pipeline

A judicial review will determine whether Ottawa has adequately consulted with Indigenous communities about the project

Look for signs that an article is an opinion-piece, such as labels, photos of journalists, or names of the authors up front.

Why is it important to distinguish between fact-based news reporting and commentary?
