

and for the garlic! WEIRD WORLDS has raised up some true stories that will have you asking ...

are there real VAMPIRES?

Illustration by Albert Loren

Vampires have always fascinated people. Every country in the world has its vampire legends. Some tell of living people who crave blood. Others describe the "undead," or even ghostly vampires without bodies!

Of course, most of us know about vampires from watching Dracula movies. And by now, most people know that Dracula was based on a historical person named Vlad Tepes. There's no proof that he was a vampire — but believe me, he was no Boy Scout! Vlad Tepes lived in Wallachia (now Rumania) during the 1400's. His father's name was Dracul, which is the origin of the name Dracula.

Life was cheap in those days, and Vlad ran a bargain basement. For various offenses, Vlad impaled people, threw them to wolves and bears, nailed hats onto their heads, and burned entire rooms full of peasants. He was so evil that many hideous legends grew up about him. One said that he drank human blood.

There is, however, no definite proof of this. But other cases of vampirism have been authenticated.

Take Countess Elizabeth Bathory (please). She lived about 100 years after Vlad. They would have liked one another. The Countess, never a nice lady, was afraid at age 40 that her beauty was fading. One fateful day she slapped her maid so hard that the maid's blood spurted onto Elizabeth's hand. Elizabeth thought the skin looked younger where the blood landed.

For the next 10 years, the Countess's servants bribed or kidnapped women from the surrounding countryside. These unfortunate women became the victims of the Countess's vampirism.

The Bathory family was so powerful that Elizabeth literally got away with murder for years. Then her power went to her head, and she publicly cursed the King. The King took this as an excuse to raid her castle. What soldiers found there curdled their blood! The Countess was brought to trial on murder charges. She was found guilty of killing between 40 and 300 young women! Elizabeth's accomplices were beheaded or burned. The Countess is walled in her room where she died, completely insane, four years later.

A CRAVING FOR BLOOD

There are many more cases of hemotomania — a craving for human blood. John George Haigh was an infamous British hemotomaniac. John often dreamed that a bowl of blood was handed to him, and he would try to drink from it. As an adult, Haigh decided to make his dream come true.

Throughout the 1930's and 1940's, Haigh claimed an unknown number of victims. After killing someone, he drained their blood. Then to destroy the evidence he dissolved the body in a tank of sulphuric acid which he kept in his own laboratory.

Haigh was caught in 1949 after trying to pawn his latest victim's belongings. He freely admitted the murder, plus many others police never suspected. But, he said, there were no bodies — and thus, no proof of murder! Unfortunately for Haigh, his latest victim was not quite dissolved. Haigh was found guilty of murder and hanged.

THE HANOVER VAMPIRE!

Even Haigh was outdone by the grisly Hanover Vampire — Fritz Haarmann! Fritz was a loser who'd been in and out of the army, jail, and a couple of insane asylums. After World War I, he apparently settled down and opened up a butcher shop in Hanover, Germany. Business was too good.

In 1924, Germany was completely disrupted. Thousands of young run-away boys rode the rails looking for work, and Hanover was a big stop. Fritz and his best friend, Hans Grans, were usually at the station ready to offer a hungry boy a place to stay. Unfortunately, the boys later became the victims of Haarmann's vampirism!

One night Fritz and Grans had a terrible fight. The cops showed up, expecting your average quarrel. Instead, they found a body shop — with real bodies! Caught, literally red-handed, Grans was imprisoned for life. Fritz was beheaded on April 15, 1925. But scientists kept his brain for study!

EXPLANATIONS

Even though it is undoubtedly true that real vampires have existed, many of the references to vampires and vampire attacks can be explained in other ways. For example, a person who is convinced that he or she is being attacked by a vampire may actually become ill and even die — from hysteria or sleeplessness, or both. At times, this kind of hysteria has overtaken whole villages. And in this irrational state, people have "seen" vampires everywhere.

One myth about vampires is that they retain their lifelike appearance in the grave. History is full of stories of graves that were opened to reveal life-like corpses, which people took to be evidence of vampirism. The explanation for this has more to do with conditions of the soil and climate than with tales of the undead.

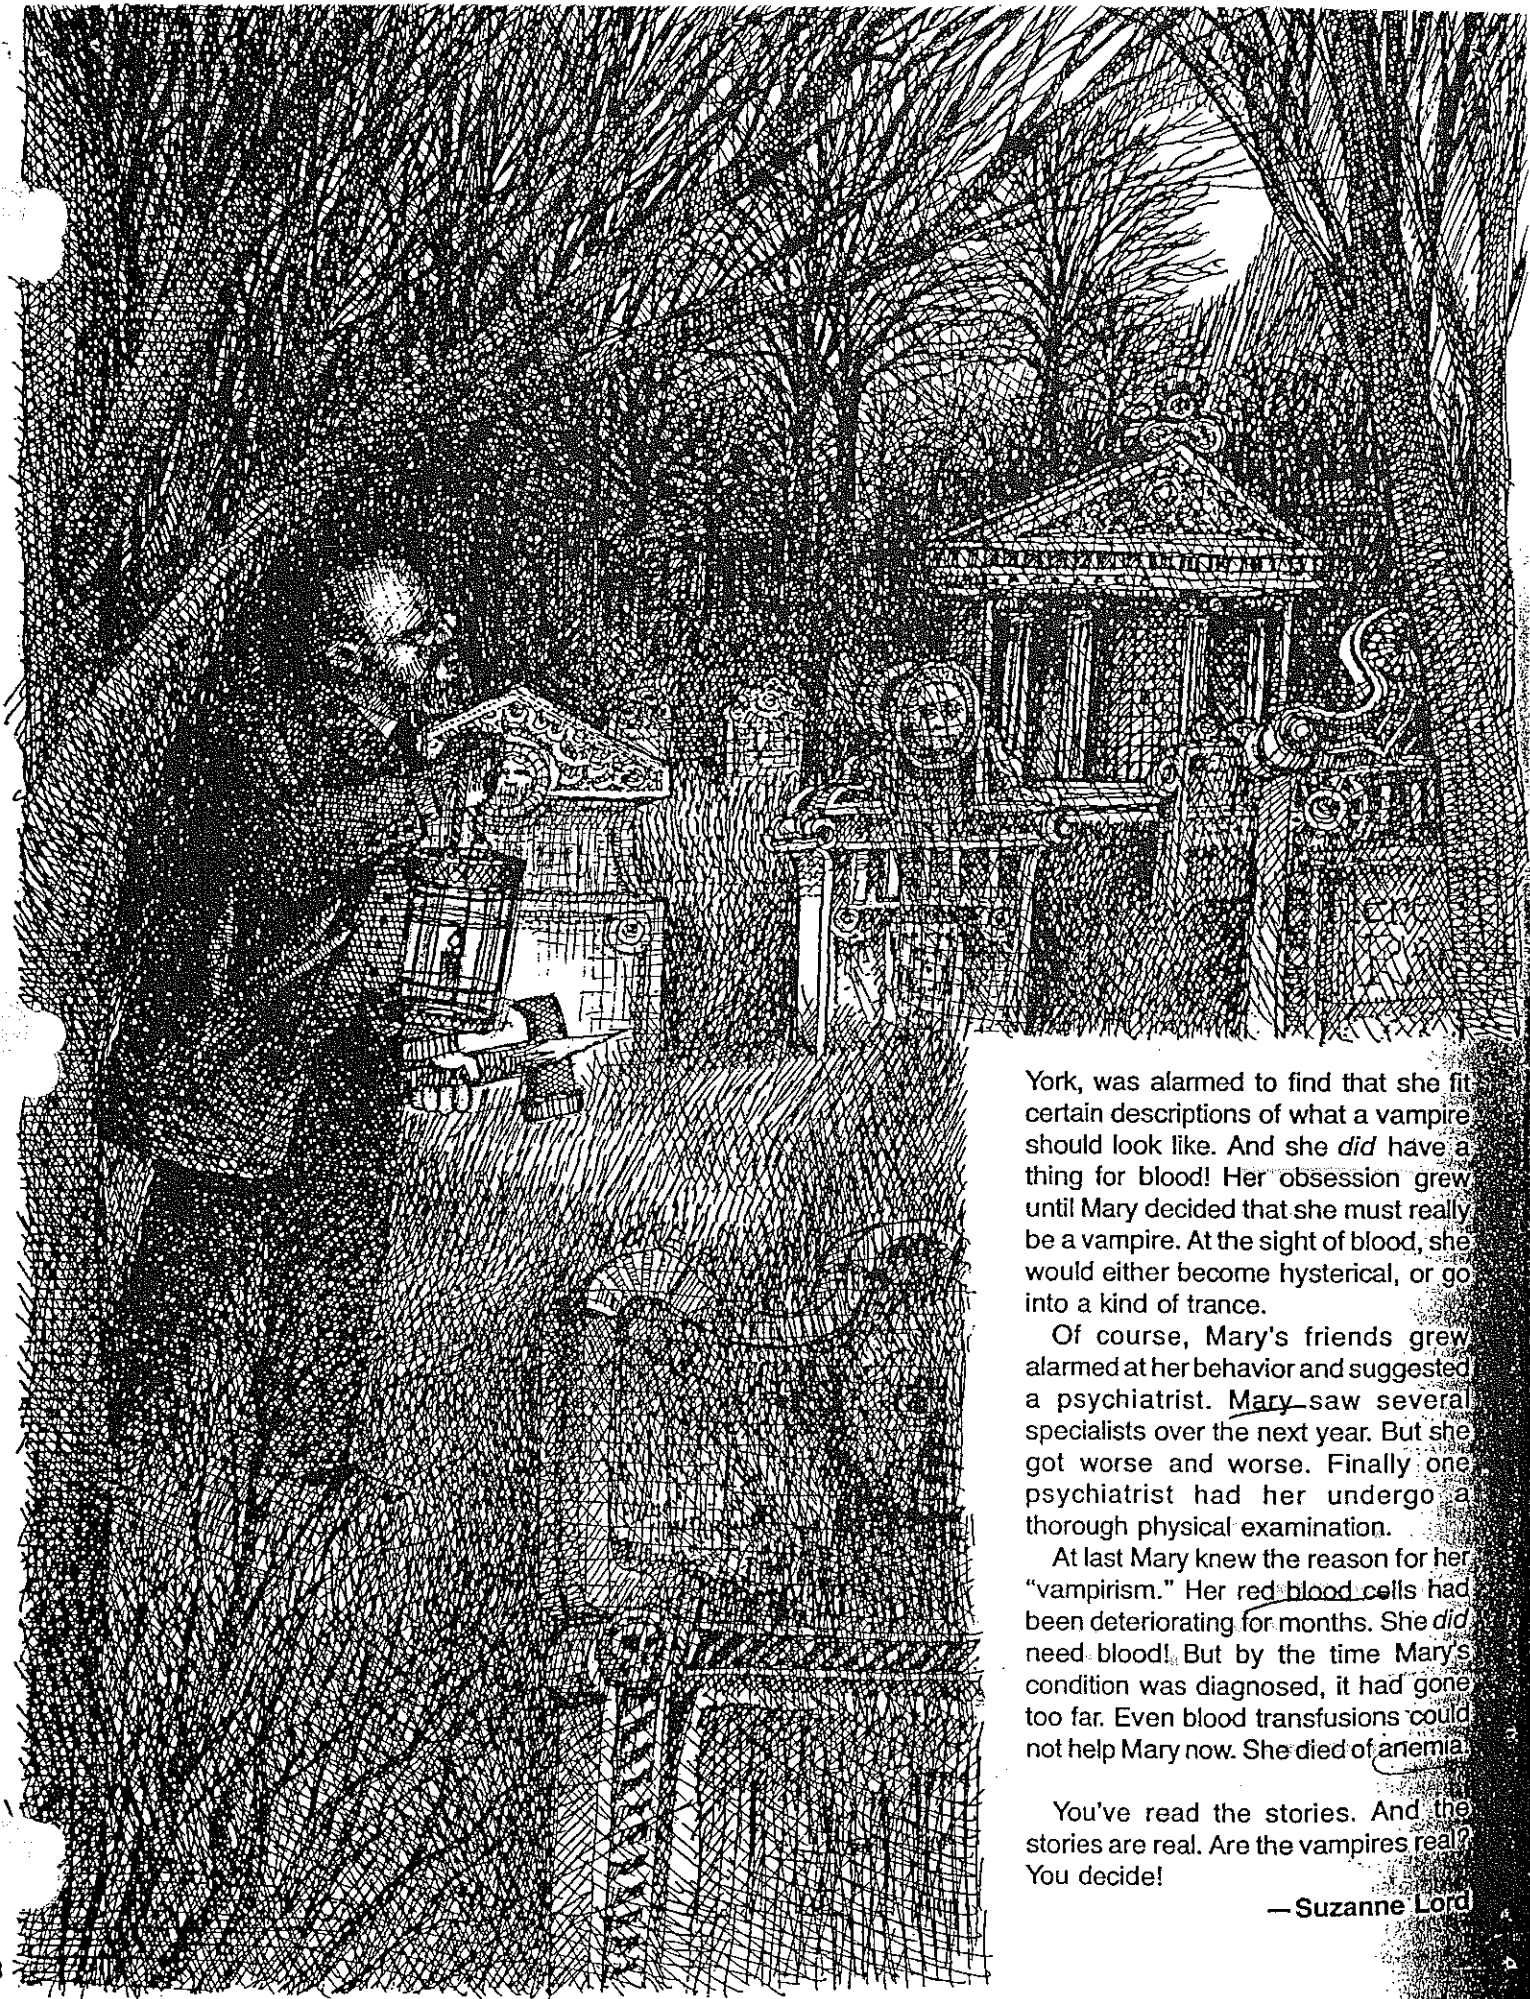

There are also many stories about dead people who have pried open their coffins and lived again. The most probable explanation is that the "corpses" were actually coma victims who recovered after their burial. All of these factors have contributed to the scores of stories about vampires and vampire attacks.

NOT A DEAD ART

Is vampire hunting a dead art? Not to Allan Farrow. Allan was arrested in August, 1970, for trespassing in a London graveyard. He was looking for vampires to slay — and was armed with a crucifix and sharpened stake to do the job!

Ghostly, or "spectral" vampires are a rarity. But a group of 20th-century Russian sailors will swear that they're not all just legends! Until 1903, the Ivan Vasilli was just another ship. Then sailors began to feel a terrible "something" standing behind them. Worse yet, they felt their energy being drained "like some ghastly suction pump!" Over a period of time, three captains of this ship committed suicide. Sailors deserted in droves. Finally no one would sign onto the Ivan Vasilli, and the ship was destroyed. But it was not sunk. It was burned — the only way, sailors felt, that the vampire would perish with the ship! By the way, Ivan Vasilli was the proper name of Ivan the Terrible — a man with a reputation every bit as bloody as Dracula's!

We have one more "vampire" pitiful case from the 1930's. Max Lensfield from Brooklyn Heights, New York, was alarmed to find that she fit certain descriptions of what a vampire should look like. And she did have a thing for blood! Her obsession grew until Mary decided that she must really be a vampire. At the sight of blood, she would either become hysterical, or go into a kind of trance.

Of course, Mary's friends grew alarmed at her behavior and suggested a psychiatrist. Mary saw several specialists over the next year. But she got worse and worse. Finally one psychiatrist had her undergo a thorough physical examination.

At last Mary knew the reason for her "vampirism." Her red blood cells had been deteriorating for months. She did need blood! But by the time Mary's condition was diagnosed, it had gone too far. Even blood transfusions could not help Mary now. She died of anemia.

You've read the stories. And the stories are real. Are the vampires real? You decide!

—Suzanne Lord

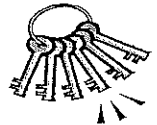

Topic:	Name:
Date:	Subject:
Main ideas or discussion points:	My questions and reflections:
Keys to Learning: 1: Logical Explanations 2: Origins of the Myth "Vampire"

Double Entry Response

Topic: Are there real Vampires?	Date:	Name:
Main ideas or discussion points: Universal. Vlad Tepes, Romania - Father: Dracul Countess Bathory "young ♀" 40-300 murdered. hemotomania: crave blood. Haigh 1930-1940's Haarman - Germany 1) villages, people convinced they've seen vampires = hysteria 2) lifelike corpses = poor condition 3) rise from crypt = coma	Subject: Eng 10-2	My questions and reflections: Where did she live? Is this why "Dracula" is handsome, seductive? Where? Is this in the present? Are there modern cases. Village hallucination ~ is this argot poisoning?

Keys to Learning:

1. Logical explanations
2. Origins of the myth "vampire"

NO ONE WANTS TO BE ALONE! ON NEW YEAR'S EVE -- SO LONELY LAUREL HULL ACCEPTS AN INVITATION TO A COSTUME DANCE. BUT, SOMETIMES IT'S WISER TO TURN DOWN AN INVITATION-- FOR EXAMPLE, WHEN A MYSTERIOUS STRANGER INVITES YOU TO...

CHANGE PARTNERS AND DIE WITH ME!

TEXT:
JANE STINE
&
BOB STINE

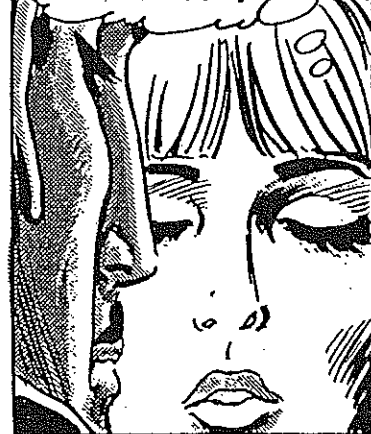

ALL THROUGH THE EVENING, THE STRANGER STAYS BY LAUREL'S SIDE. SHE FEELS HERSELF DRAWN TO HIM, YET-- SOMEHOW-- FRIGHTENED!

WHY WON'T HE TELL ME HIS NAME? WHAT IS HE HIDING?

HE'S HOLDING ME SO TIGHT! I WISH HE COULD HOLD ME THIS WAY FOREVER!

THE IMPACT OF THE CRASH IS SO GREAT THAT LAUREL IS THROWN FROM THE CAR...

SLOWLY REGAINING CONSCIOUSNESS, LAUREL DISCOVERS THE SCORCHED AND BLOODY BODY THAT WAS ONCE HER MYSTERIOUS STRANGER.

OH-- NO! NO!! I THOUGHT WE'D BE TOGETHER FOR ALL TIME--BUT, NOW I'VE LOST YOU FOREVER!

PERHAPS NOT, MY DEAR!

YOU'RE ALIVE! IT'S NOT POSSIBLE!

NO-- I'M NOT ALIVE! BUT WE'LL HAVE TIME TO TALK ABOUT THAT LATER! FOLLOW ME!

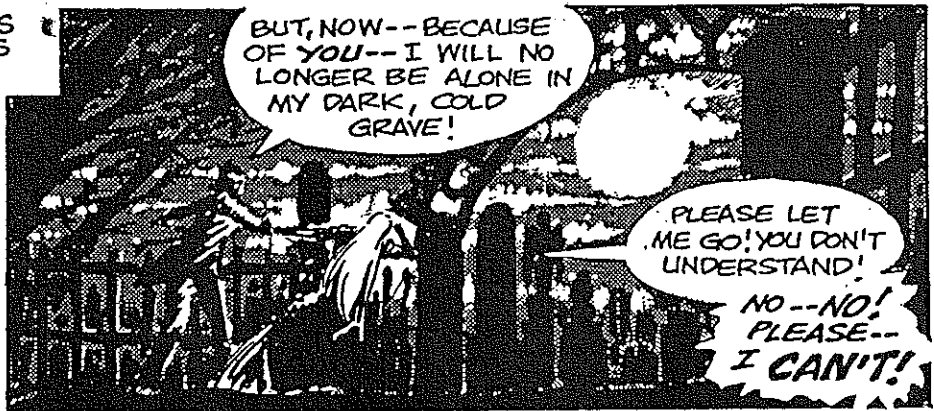

UNABLE TO ESCAPE THE STRANGER'S POWERFUL GRASP, LAUREL FOLLOWS AND HEARS HIS STRANGE STORY...

--AND SO-- YOU SEE, I WAS KILLED ON THAT NEW YEAR'S EVE--50 YEARS AGO! NOW I AM DOOMED TO REPEAT THAT AWFUL CRASH EVERY NEW YEAR'S FOR ETERNITY!

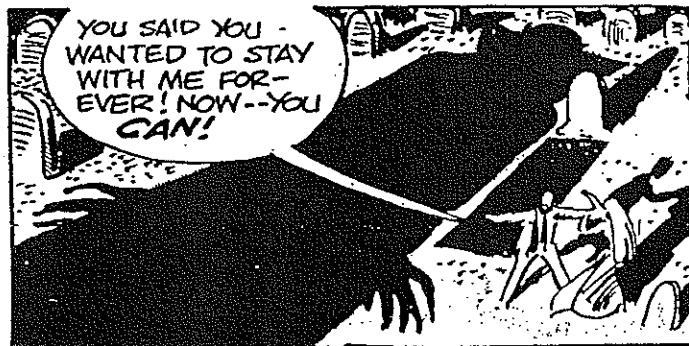

BUT, NOW-- BECAUSE OF YOU-- I WILL NO LONGER BE ALONE IN MY DARK, COLD GRAVE!

PLEASE LET ME GO! YOU DON'T UNDERSTAND!

NO--NO! PLEASE-- I CAN'T!

YOU SAID YOU WANTED TO STAY WITH ME FOREVER! NOW--YOU CAN!

NOW--IT IS THE STRANGER'S TURN TO BE SHOCKED-- FOR THERE IN THE DISTANCE STANDS A TOWERING FIGURE OF A MAN WHO CAN STRIKE TERROR INTO ANY HEART!

Bela Lugosi

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Béla Ferenc Dezső Blaskó (20 October 1882 – 16 August 1956), commonly known as Bela Lugosi, was a Hungarian actor of stage and screen.^[2] He was best known for having played Count Dracula in the Broadway play and subsequent film version, as well as having starred in several of Ed Wood's low budget films in the last years of his career.

Contents

- 1 Early life
- 2 Career
 - 2.1 Early films
 - 2.2 Dracula
 - 2.3 Typecasting
 - 2.4 Career path
 - 2.5 Working with Ed Wood
- 3 Personal life
- 4 Death
- 5 Plan 9 from Outer Space
- 6 Legacy
- 7 Filmography
- 8 References
- 9 Further reading
- 10 External links

Early life

Lugosi, the youngest of four children,^[3] was born as Béla Ferenc Dezső Blaskó in Lugos (at the time part of Austria–Hungary, now Lugoj in Romania), to Paula de Vojnich and István Blaskó, a banker.^[4] He later based his last name on his hometown.^[3] He and his sister Vilma were raised in a Roman Catholic family.^[5] At the age of 12, Lugosi dropped out of school.^[3] He began his acting career probably in 1901 or 1902. His earliest known performances are from provincial theaters in the 1903–1904 season, playing small roles in several plays and operettas.^[6] He went on to Shakespeare plays and other major roles. Moving to Budapest in 1911, he played dozens of

Bela Lugosi

Bela Lugosi in 1920

Born	Béla Ferenc Dezső Blaskó 20 October 1882 Lugos, Austria-Hungary (now Lugoj, Romania)
Died	16 August 1956 (aged 73) Los Angeles, California, United States
Cause of death	Heart Attack
Resting place	Holy Cross Cemetery
Occupation	Actor
Years active	1917–1956
Spouse	Ilona Szmick (1917–1920) (divorced) Ilona von Montag (1921–1924) (divorced) Beatrice Weeks (1929–1929) (divorced) Lillian Arch (1933–1953) (divorced) 1 child ^[1]

roles with the National Theater of Hungary in the period 1913–1919. Although Lugosi would later claim that he "became the leading actor of Hungary's Royal National Theater", almost all his roles there were small or supporting parts.^[7]

During World War I, he served as an infantry lieutenant in the Austro-Hungarian Army from 1914 to 1916. There he rose to the rank of captain in the ski patrol and was awarded a medal for being wounded at the Russian front.^[3]

Due to his activism in the actors union in Hungary during the time of the Hungarian Revolution of 1919, he was forced to flee his homeland.^[3] He first went to Vienna, Austria, and then settled in Germany, Berlin, in the Langestrasse where he continued acting.^[3] Eventually, he traveled to New Orleans as a crewman aboard a merchant ship.^[3]

Career

Early films

Lugosi's first film appearance was in the 1917 movie Az ezredes (known in English as The Colonel). When appearing in Hungarian silent films he used the stage name Arisztid Olt. Lugosi made 12 films in Hungary between 1917 and 1918 before leaving for Germany. Following the collapse of Béla Kun's Hungarian Soviet Republic in 1919, leftists and trade unionists became vulnerable. Lugosi was proscribed from acting due to his participation in the formation of an actors' union. In exile in Germany, he began appearing in a small number of well received films, including adaptations of the Karl May novels, Auf den Trümmern des Paradieses (On the Brink of Paradise), and Die Todeskarawane (The Caravan of Death), opposite the ill-fated Jewish actress Dora Gerson. Lugosi left Germany in October 1920, intending to emigrate to the United States, and entered the country at New Orleans in December 1920. He made his way to New York and was legally inspected for immigration at Ellis Island in March 1921.^[8] He declared his intention to become a U.S. citizen in 1928, and on June 26, 1931, he was naturalized.^[9]

On his arrival in America, the 6 foot 1 inch (1.85 m), 180 lb. (82 kg) Béla worked for some time as a laborer, then entered the theater in New York City's Hungarian immigrant colony. With fellow Hungarian actors he formed a small stock company that toured Eastern cities, playing for immigrant audiences. He acted in his first Broadway play, The Red Poppy, in 1922. Three more parts came in 1925–1926, including a five-month run in the comedy-fantasy The Devil in the Cheese.^[10] His first American film role came in the 1923 melodrama The Silent Command. Several more silent roles followed, as villains or continental types, all in productions made in the New York area.

Dracula

Lugosi was approached in the summer of 1927^[11] to star in a Broadway production of Dracula adapted by Hamilton Deane and John L. Balderston from Bram Stoker's novel. The Horace Liveright production was successful, running 261 performances before touring. He was soon called to Hollywood for character parts in early talkies.

	Hope Lininger (1955–1956) (his death)
Children	Bela George Lugosi
Parents	István Blaskó (father) Paula de Vojnich (mother)
	Website
	http://www.lugosi.com

Despite his critically acclaimed performance on stage, Lugosi was not Universal Pictures' first choice for the role of Dracula when the company optioned the rights to the Deane play and began production in 1930. A persistent rumor asserts that director Tod Browning's long-time collaborator, Lon Chaney, was Universal's first choice for the role, and that Lugosi was chosen only due to Chaney's death shortly before production. This is questionable, because Chaney had been under long-term contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer since 1925, and had negotiated a lucrative new contract just before his death.

Chaney and Browning had worked together on several projects (including four of Chaney's final five releases), but Browning was only a last-minute choice to direct the movie version of Dracula after the death of director Paul Leni, who was originally slated to direct.

Typecasting

Through his association with Dracula (in which he appeared with minimal makeup, using his natural, heavily accented voice), Lugosi found himself typecast as a horror villain in such movies as Murders in the Rue Morgue, The Raven, and Son of Frankenstein for Universal, and the independent White Zombie. His accent, while a part of his image, limited the roles he could play.

Lugosi did attempt to break type by auditioning for other roles. He lost out to Lionel Barrymore for the role of Rasputin in Rasputin and the Empress; C. Henry Gordon for the role of Surat Khan in Charge of the Light Brigade; Basil Rathbone for the role of Commissar Dimitri Gorotchenko in Tovarich (a role Lugosi had played on stage). He did play the elegant, somewhat hot-tempered Gen. Nicholas Strenovsky-Petronovich in International House.

Regardless of controversy, five films at Universal — The Black Cat, The Raven, The Invisible Ray, Son of Frankenstein, Black Friday (plus minor cameo performances in 1934's Gift of Gab) and two at RKO Pictures, You'll Find Out and The Body Snatcher — paired Lugosi with Boris Karloff. Despite the relative size of their roles, Lugosi inevitably got second billing, below Karloff. Lugosi's attitude toward Karloff is the subject of contradictory reports, some claiming that he was openly resentful of Karloff's long-term success and ability to get good roles beyond the horror arena, while others suggested the two actors were — for a time, at least — good friends. Karloff himself in interviews suggested that Lugosi was initially mistrustful of him when they acted together, believing that the Englishman would attempt to upstage him. When this proved not to be the case, according to Karloff, Lugosi settled down and they worked together amicably (though some have further commented that Karloff's on-set demand to break from filming for mid-afternoon tea annoyed Lugosi).

Universal tried to give Lugosi more heroic roles, as in The Black Cat, The Invisible Ray, and a romantic role in the adventure serial The Return of Chandu, but his typecasting problem was too entrenched for those roles to help.

Lugosi addressed his plea to be cast in non-horror roles directly to casting directors through his listing in the 1937 Players Directory, published by the Motion Picture Academy, in which he (or his agent) calls the idea that he is only fit for horror films "an error."^[12]

Career path

A number of factors worked against Lugosi's career in the mid-1930s. Universal changed management in 1936, and because of a British ban on horror films, dropped them from their production schedule; Lugosi found himself consigned to Universal's non-horror B-film unit, at times in small roles where he was obviously used for "name value" only. Throughout the 1930s, Lugosi, experiencing a severe career decline despite popularity with audiences (Universal executives always preferred his rival Karloff), accepted many leading roles from independent producers like Nat Levine, Sol Lesser, and Sam Katzman. These low-budget thrillers indicate that Lugosi was less discriminating than Karloff in selecting screen vehicles, but the exposure helped Lugosi financially if not artistically. Lugosi tried to keep busy with stage work, but had to borrow money from the Actors' Fund to pay hospital bills when his only child, Bela George Lugosi, was born in 1938.

His career was given a second chance by Universal's Son of Frankenstein in 1939, when he played the character role of Ygor, who uses the Monster for his own revenge, in heavy makeup and beard. The same year saw Lugosi playing a straight character role in a major motion picture: he was a stern commissar in MGM's comedy Ninotchka, starring Greta Garbo. This small but prestigious role could have been a turning point for the actor, but within the year he was back on Hollywood's Poverty Row, playing leads for Sam Katzman. These horror, comedy and mystery B-films were released by Monogram Pictures. At Universal, he often received star billing for what amounted to a supporting part. The Gorilla (1939) had him playing straight man to Patsy Kelly, in a role she told author Boze Hadleigh was her finest role.

From The Devil Bat, 1940

Ostensibly due to injuries received during military service, Lugosi developed severe, chronic sciatica. Though at first he was treated with pain remedies such as asparagus juice, doctors increased the medication to opiates. The growth of his dependence on pain-killers, particularly morphine and methadone, was directly proportional to the dwindling of screen offers. In 1943, he finally played the role of Frankenstein's monster in Universal's Frankenstein Meets the Wolfman, which this time contained dialogue (Lugosi's voice had been dubbed over that of Lon Chaney, Jr., from line readings at the end of 1942's The Ghost of Frankenstein because Ygor's brain had been transplanted into the Monster). Lugosi continued to play the Monster with Ygor's consciousness but with groping gestures because the Monster was now blind. Ultimately, all of the Monster's dialogue and all references to his sightlessness were edited out of the released film, leaving a strange, maimed performance characterized by unexplained gestures and lip movements with no words coming out. He also came to recreate the role of Dracula a second and last time on film in Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein in 1948. By this time, Lugosi's drug use was so notorious that the producers were not even aware that Lugosi was still alive, and had penciled in actor Ian Keith for the role.

Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein was Bela Lugosi's last "A" movie. For the remainder of his life he appeared — less and less frequently — in obscure, low-budget features. From 1947 to 1950, he performed in summer stock, often in productions of Dracula or Arsenic and Old Lace, and during the rest of the year made personal appearances in a touring "spook show" and on television. While in England to play a six-month tour of Dracula in 1951, he co-starred in a lowbrow movie comedy, Mother Riley Meets the Vampire (also known as Vampire over London and My Son, the Vampire). Upon his return to America, Lugosi was interviewed for television, and revealed his ambition to play more comedy, though wistfully noting, "Now I am the boogie man." Independent producer Jack Broder took Lugosi at his word, casting him in a jungle-themed comedy, Bela Lugosi Meets a Brooklyn Gorilla. Another opportunity for comedy came in September 1949 when Milton Berle invited Lugosi to appear in a sketch on Texaco Star Theater.^[13] Lugosi memorized the script for the skit, but became confused on the air when Berle began to ad lib.^[14] This was depicted in the Tim Burton film Ed Wood, with Martin Landau as Lugosi. Though Burton did not actually identify the comedian in the biopic, the events depicted were correct.

Working with Ed Wood

Late in his life, Bela Lugosi again received star billing in movies when filmmaker Ed Wood, a fan of Lugosi, found him living in obscurity and near-poverty and offered him roles in his films, such as Glen or Glenda and as a Dr. Frankenstein-like mad scientist in Bride of the Monster. During post-production of the latter, Lugosi decided to seek treatment for his drug addiction, and the premiere of the film was said to be intended to help pay for his hospital expenses. According to Kitty Kelley's biography of Frank Sinatra, when the entertainer heard of Lugosi's problems, he helped with expenses and visited at the hospital. Lugosi would recall his amazement, since he didn't even know Sinatra.^[15]

The extras on an early DVD release of Plan 9 from Outer Space include an impromptu interview with Lugosi upon his exit from the treatment center in 1955, which provide some rare personal insights into the man. During the interview, Lugosi states that he is about to go to work on a new Ed Wood film, The Ghoul Goes West. This was one of several projects proposed by Wood, including The Phantom Ghoul and Dr. Acula. With Lugosi in his famed Dracula cape, Wood shot impromptu test footage, with no storyline in mind, in front of Tor Johnson's home, a suburban graveyard and in front of Lugosi's apartment building on Carlton Way. This footage ended up in Plan 9 from Outer Space.

Following his treatment, Lugosi made one final film, in late 1955, The Black Sleep, for Bel-Air Pictures, which was released in the summer of 1956 through United Artists with a promotional campaign that included several personal appearances. To his disappointment, however, his role in this film was of a mute, with no dialogue.

Personal life

In 1917, Lugosi married Ilona Szmick. The couple divorced in 1920, reputedly over political differences with her parents.

In 1929, Lugosi took his place in Hollywood society and scandal when he married wealthy San Francisco widow Beatrice Weeks, but she filed for divorce four months later. Weeks cited actress Clara Bow as the "other woman".^[16]

In 1933 he married 19-year-old Lillian Arch, the daughter of Hungarian immigrants. They had a child, Bela G. Lugosi, in 1938.^[17]

Lillian and Béla divorced in 1953,^[1] at least partially because of Béla's jealousy over Lillian taking a full-time job as an assistant to Brian Donlevy on the sets and studios for Donlevy's radio and television series Dangerous Assignment^[18] — Lillian eventually did marry Brian Donlevy, in 1966.

Lugosi married Hope Lininger, his fifth wife, in 1955. She had been a fan of his, writing letters to him when he was in hospital recovering from addiction to Demerol. She would sign her letters 'A dash of Hope'.

Death

Lugosi died of a heart attack on August 16, 1956, while lying on a couch in his Los Angeles home. He was 73.^[19] The rumor that Lugosi was clutching the script for The Final Curtain, a planned Ed Wood project, at the time of his death is not true.^[20]

Lugosi was buried wearing one of the Dracula Cape costumes, per the request of his son and fourth wife, in the Holy Cross Cemetery in Culver City, California. Contrary to popular belief, Lugosi never requested to be buried in his cloak; Bela G. Lugosi confirmed on numerous occasions that he and his mother, Lillian, actually made the decision but believed that it is what his father would have wanted.^[21]

Plan 9 from Outer Space

One of Lugosi's roles was released posthumously. Ed Wood's Plan 9 from Outer Space (Originally titled Grave Robbers From Outer Space) features footage of Lugosi interspersed with a double. Wood had taken a few minutes of silent footage of Lugosi, in his Dracula cape, for a planned vampire picture but was unable to find financing for the project. When he later conceived Plan 9, Wood wrote the script to incorporate the Lugosi footage and hired Tom Mason, his wife's chiropractor, to double for Lugosi in additional shots.^[22] The double is thinner than Lugosi, and in every shot covers the lower half of his face with his cape, as Lugosi sometimes did in Abbott & Costello Meet Frankenstein. As Leonard Maltin put it in early editions of his movies guide book, "Lugosi died during production, and it shows."

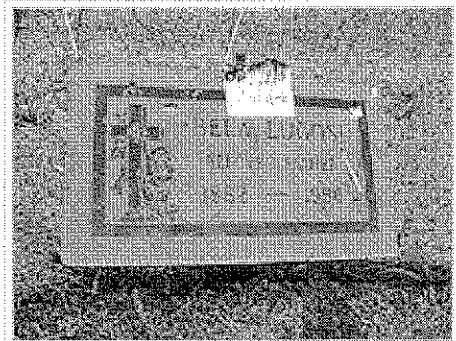

Legacy

In 1979, the Lugosi v. Universal Pictures decision by the California Supreme Court held that Bela Lugosi's personality rights could not pass to his heirs, as a copyright would have. The court ruled that under California law any rights of publicity, including the right to his image, terminated with Lugosi's death.^{[23][24]}

In Tim Burton's 1994 Ed Wood, Lugosi is played by Martin Landau in an interpretation for which Landau received an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor. According to Bela G. Lugosi (his son), Forrest Ackerman, Dolores Fuller and Richard Sheffield, Lugosi never used profanity, owned small dogs, or slept in coffins. The film fabricated much about the Hungarian actor.

Three Lugosi projects were featured on the television show Mystery Science Theater 3000. The Corpse Vanishes appeared in episode 105, the serial The Phantom Creeps throughout season two and the Ed Wood production Bride of the Monster in episode 423.

An episode of Sledge Hammer titled "Last of the Red Hot Vampires" was a homage to Bela Lugosi; at the end of the episode, it was dedicated to "Mr. Blaskó".

Lugosi's grave at Holy Cross Cemetery, Culver City, California

Star on Hollywood Walk of Fame at 6340 Hollywood Blvd.

In 2001, BBC Radio 4 broadcast There Are Such Things by Steven McNicoll and Mark McDonnell. Focusing on Lugosi and his well documented struggle to escape from the role that had typecast him, the play went on to receive The Hamilton Dean award for best dramatic presentation from the Dracula Society in 2002.

A statue of Lugosi can be seen today on one of the corners of the Vajdahunyad Castle in Budapest.

The Ellis Island Immigration Museum in New York City features a live, 30-minute play that focuses on Lugosi's illegal entry into the country and then his arrival at Ellis Island to enter the country legally.^[25]

The cape Lugosi wore in the 1931 film Dracula still survives today in the ownership of Universal Studios.

The theatrical play Lugosi - a vámpír árnyéka (Lugosi - the Shadow of the Vampire, in Hungarian) is based on Lugosi's life, telling the story of his life as he becomes typecast as Dracula and as his drug addiction worsens. He was played by one of Hungary's most renowned actors, Ivan Darvas.

Andy Warhol's 1963 silkscreen The Kiss depicts Lugosi from Dracula about to bite into the neck of co-star Helen Chandler, who played Mina Harker. A copy sold for $798,000 at Christie's in May 2000.^[26]

Lugosi was also the subject of "Bela Lugosi's Dead", the first single by English rock band Bauhaus. It was released in August 1979 and it is often considered to be the first gothic rock record.

Bela Lugosi was a charter member for the Screen Actors Guild.

Dracula
1931 movie version starring Bela Lugosi

Before viewing

1. List 2 facts you know about Bela Lugosi

While viewing

Keep in mind: This movie was made in 1931, 2 years after sound was added to movies.

2. Sound effects:

What sound effect is noticeably missing from the movie?

List one sound effect. How does it add to the atmosphere/mood?

3. Camera angles:

List one camera angle. How does it add to the atmosphere/mood?

4. Special effects:

Special effects are any attempts by the filmmaker to trick the audience into believing they are seeing a real item or place. Because of the age of the movie, the effects are much more obvious to us than they would have been to the 1931 audience.

List 2 special effects used in the movie. Do you know how the director staged them? How do they add to the atmosphere of the movie?

5. This movie is based on the play we are reading. List at least three ways the movie Dracula differs from the Dracula in the play.

Key

Dracula
1931 movie version starring Bela Lugosi

Before viewing

1. List 2 facts you know about Bela Lugosi

- morphine addict
- buried in cape
- typecast - Hungarian

While viewing

Keep in mind: This movie was made in 1931, 2 years after sound was added to movies.

2. Sound effects:

What sound effect is noticeably missing from the movie?

music

List one sound effect. How does it add to the atmosphere/mood?

3. Camera angles:

List one camera angle. How does it add to the atmosphere/mood?

Zoom in on Drac's eyes Close-up of bugs
Low angle to Drac

4. Special effects:

Special effects are any attempts by the filmmaker to trick the audience into believing they are seeing a real item or place. Because of the age of the movie, the effects are much more obvious to us than they would have been to the 1931 audience.

List 2 special effects used in the movie. Do you know how the director staged them? How do they add to the atmosphere of the movie?

Mountain-scape. Painted. Rural setting
Mist. Dry-ice machine. Eeriness

5. This movie is based on the play we are reading. List at least three ways the movie Dracula differs from the Dracula in the play.

1. Renfield's background
2. Opens before play
3. See Drac's ability to hypnotise early.

DRACULA

Name: _____

The enclosed questions are the assignment for this unit.

You will be marked on the following criteria:

- | | |
|--|-----|
| 1. Set Design | /10 |
| • Neat, creative, colorful, accurate | |
| 2. Comprehensive answers | /30 |
| • Thought and understanding | |
| 3. Answers written in complete sentences | /10 |

TOTAL: /50

Due Date: two days after we finish the play.

Answer all questions in full sentences.

ACT 1

1. Before Count Dracula even appears on stage, the playwrights prepare the audience for the presence of a vampire. How do the following events serve to alert the viewer?
 - a. Seward tells Harker that Renfield has always been a quiet patient. Recently, he has been wild and uncontrollable.
 - b. Ever since Mina became ill, the dogs in the village have been howling as if in terror, as though wolves were present.
 - c. After each blood transfusion, Mina grew stronger, but in the morning, she was pale again and had two little marks on her throat.
2. Lucy appears with a scarf around her neck. What is she hiding? Who else had a similar injury?
3. Renfield is an inmate of the sanitarium because of a strange illness. What is it? Why does it make him particularly susceptible to Dracula's powers?
4. Several times, a bat appears trying to fly into a window. What does its purpose seem to be?

Dracula - Act 2

1. Dracula offers to hypnotize the maid to rid her of the pain in her head. What is his real purpose?
2. Van Helsing says that a vampire from Transylvania can't be in England. Why not? How does travel by plane make Dracula's presence possible?
3. Van Helsing confirms his suspicions that Dracula is a vampire with three tests.
 - a. One is accomplished with a mirror.
 - b. The second requires a cut in Van Helsing's finger.
 - c. The third test uses a handful of wolfsbane.

*Explain the significance of each test
4. Lucy is drawn to a newspaper story which she reads with dread. What is it about? Who is the mysterious, beautiful woman in the story?
5. Lucy asks Harker to promise that he will not tell her anything he plans to do in his struggle against the vampire and that he will not allow her to kiss him. Why not?

Dracula - Act 3

1. A change has taken place in Lucy. How do her appearance and behavior show that she is now more under Dracula's power? What shows that there is still hope for her?
2. Van Helsing, Harker, and Seward corner Dracula and try to prevent his escape from the library of the sanitarium. What power do they have over him?
3. Final destruction of the vampire takes place when the three men track him to his lair. Where do they find him? How do they dispose of him?

KEY

DRACULA

ACT 1

1. Before Count Dracula even appears on stage, the playwrights prepare the audience for the presence of a vampire. How do these events serve to alert the viewer ?

a) Seward tells Harker that Renfield has always been a quiet patient. Recently, he has become wild and uncontrollable.

b) Ever since Mina became ill, the dogs in the village have been howling as if in terror, as though there were wolves present.

c) After each blood transfusion, Mina grew stronger, but in the morning she was pale again and showed two little marks on her throat.

* 2. Lucy appears with a scarf around her neck. What is she hiding ? Who else had a similar injury ? bite marks Mina

* 3. Renfield is an inmate of the sanitarium because of a strange illness. What is it ? Why does it make him particularly susceptible to Dracula's powers ? Zoophagous. Eats bugs. Eat life = living

* 4. Several times a bat appears trying to fly into a window. What does its purpose seem to be ? ~ communicating w/ Renfield

 = quotes needed*

4

DRACULA ACT 2

1. Dracula offers to hypnotize the maid to rid her of the pain in her head. What is his real purpose? hypnotize → maintain access to Lucy b/c Renfield is unreliable
 2. Van Helsing says that a vampire from Transylvania can't be in England. Why not? How does travel by plane make Dracula's presence possible? Must sleep in cemetery soil. He can fly in 1 day & transport 6 boxes & a
 3. Van Helsing confirms his suspicions that Dracula is a vampire with three tests. One is accomplished with a mirror, the second with a cut in Van Helsing's finger, and the third with a handful of wolfsbane. Explain the significance of each test. How do Dracula's reactions prove that Van Helsing's suspicions are correct? see below
 4. Lucy is drawn to a newspaper story which she reads with dread. What is it about? Who is the mysterious and beautiful woman in the story? Mina
see below
 5. Lucy asks Harker to promise that he will not tell her anything he plans to do in his struggle against the vampire and that he will not allow her to kiss him. Why not?
3. a. mirror: No reflection pg. 173 "but I cannot see [you]...
The undead ≠ shadow or reflection "The mirror does not reflect this man that was, who casts no shadow"
 - b. Dracula "keeping control = difficulty" (173) "baring teeth makes sudden snap" (173). Lure of blood
 - c. Holding wolfsbane "Dracula leaps back, ... shielding himself & cloak."
4. The Hampstead Horror lures children & then bites their necks. Beautiful ♀. Children hope to see her again. (like Lucy's desire for Dracula). It is Mina, newly "undead," wearing white
 5. Lucy knows that Dracula has access to her secret thoughts

DRACULA ACT 3

1. A change has taken place in Lucy. How do her appearance and behaviour show that she is now more in Dracula's power? What shows that there is still hope for her? Color in her cheeks; lures Harker to tell her plans & kiss her (pg 182-183). Kisses cross = hope (not full vampire)
2. Van Helsing, Harker, and Seward corner Dracula and try to prevent his escape from the library of the sanitarium. What power do they have over him? Host of crucifixes ∴ good/God over evil/devil → also pity not revenge or cruelty (evil thoughts)
3. Final destruction of the vampire takes place when the three men track him to his lair. Where do they find him? How do they dispose of him?
Through the library panel to a vault under the sanitarium with a passage leading to Carfax. (Evil in your home) Stake through heart (190)

OVERVIEW

1. Two women are chosen as victims by Dracula. Who are they? Which one dies? Who is saved while she is still alive? Who is saved after death? How? Mina dies; Lucy saved. Mina is killed & stake through her heart.

2. The playwrights use color to convey impressions of evil, damnation, salvation, and innocence.

- a) What color does Lucy wear? Why is it appropriate for her?

(pg 152) White = purity; emphasize paleness; bride (to Harker & to Drac)

- b) When Lucy first sees Dracula, it is as if in a dream, through a mist or fog. She remembers only two red eyes looking at her. What association is one expected to make with the color red?

Red = danger; evil; devil; blood

- c) What color accompanies Dracula as he appears in Lucy's bedroom?

What effect might it have on the audience?

(p. 178) Green: sickness; monster; eeriness

- d) In Act 3, Lucy's cheeks are no longer pale. She is described as having "blood in her cheeks." What are we being told?
She has fed on blood from Dracula (p 185)

- e) At the end of the play we see Dracula covered by the red light of the fireplace. What might these flames symbolize?

(pg 185) Hell. (Replaces blue light ∴ death replaced by damnation/hell; anger; Dracula to burn.)

3. All of these sounds are heard offstage during the play, each a result of Dracula's presence:

- a) wild, maniacal laughter Renfield (Act I; pg 146) initial "unnatural"
- b) the howl of a wolf Werewolf (Act I, p. 162) Suspect ~~vampirism~~
- c) a pistol shot (Act ~~I~~, pg. 174) Harker shooting @ "bat"
 :: danger near
 :: protecting Lucy. attendant too

Explain each sound.

4. How do Van Helsing's knowledge, judgement, and strong will make him more effective than any other character fighting Dracula? When is Van Helsing's ^{testing Dracula} knowledge especially important? When is ^{to go after Drac not just sail} his judgement? His strong will?

Knowledge = brings understanding of vampires; suspects vampire when Seward first contacts him; knows the tests to check if Dracula is a vampire;

judgement = able to understand what has happened to Mina; recognizes that destroying soul will not solve Lucy's "problem" (169); judges Harker to be strong enough to help Lucy (pg 167); uses info to make logical decision @ the time (ex Vampire must be English pg 160) but changes & new info. judges, correctly, the danger a vampire is by how long they roam earth (pg 160) That Lucy will tell Drac (175)

Strong will = won't accept Seward's neutrality (pg 160); even when Drac tries to hypnotize him he can resist (pg. 174)

Drac's intelligence & cunning from 500 years of roaming.

English 10-2
Character Analysis for "Dracula"

Complete two analyses.

(Choices: Dr. Seward, John Harker, Abraham Van Helsing, R. M. Renfield, Lucy Seward, Count Dracula)

Character's Name: _____

1. For each category

- An example from the beginning of the play WITH a quotation (include page number).
- An example from the middle or end of the play, WITH a quotation (include page number).

Remember: You need one quotation from the play to support each of these details.

2. What changes have occurred in the character from what they thought at the beginning to what they think at the end of the play?

Personality trait (ex. beliefs, temperament, character traits ...)

Background trait (ex. experiences, education, intelligence, relationships...)

English 10-2
Character Analysis for "Dracula"

Complete two analyses.

(Choices: Dr. Seward, John Harker, Abraham Van Helsing, R. M. Renfield, Lucy Seward, Count Dracula)

Character's Name: _____

1. For each category

- An example from the beginning of the play WITH a quotation (include page number).
- An example from the middle or end of the play, WITH a quotation (include page number).

Remember: You need one quotation from the play to support each of these details.

2. What changes have occurred in the character from what they thought at the beginning to what they think at the end of the play?

Personality trait (ex. beliefs, temperament, character traits ...)

Background trait (ex. experiences, education, intelligence, relationships...)

Format for the Literary Exploration Essay

Paragraph 1 = Introduction (5-7 sentences)

- Discuss the larger idea from the prompt.
- Make sure you have a clear thesis/topic/theme statement.

Paragraph 2 = Discussion of the literary text (10-15 sentences)

- You must prove to the marker that you know the text extremely well and understand the topic. Do this by providing specific examples or quotations from the excerpt that relate to the topic provided.
 - Know the characters' names and how they are spelled
 - Know the author's name
- Remember transition words and phrases: to begin with, next, in addition to, moreover, for example, etc.
- Remember to have clear topic and concluding sentences.

Paragraph 3 = Discussion of a Personal Experience (10-15 sentences)

- Relate a specific and profound personal experience that relates to the topic provided.
- You must provide specific details so that I can see the scene.
- Use language that enlivens the example; I want to "hear" you.
- Remember transition words.
- You need clear topic and concluding sentences.

Paragraph 4 = Conclusion (4-5 sentences)

- Restate your theme/thesis. Use different words or phrasing if you can.
- Briefly recap what you said in the previous two paragraphs.
- Do not introduce any new characters or ideas in this paragraph.

English 10-2
Essay Format Planning Sheet
Personal Response to Literature

Introduction

- TAG (Title, Author, Genre) _____
- Essay topic: _____

- A= Main event/idea/character development/theme from the story supporting the above stated topic.

- B= Link to your own experience related to the topic.

- Identify the similarity between A and B and their relation to your topic.

First Body Paragraph

- Topic Sentence: In the story/novel/play _____

- Support: Example 1 from text.

Discuss Example 1

This shows that _____

- Support: Example 2 from text

Discuss Example 2

This shows that _____

- Concluding sentence

Oct/07

10-2

Themes in Dracula

Innocence
Good vs evil

Strength in numbers
Kinship

Love determination

even if someone appears to be innocent they may not be.

Sometimes good may triumph over evil.

Sometimes,

Under _____ circumstances

people may _____.

Themes
on other side

“Dracula” unit test Written Response

1. Personal Response (Total Marks: 50)

“Dracula” is a play that presents many ideas and themes. Using the format discussed in class, write a personal response discussing ONE of the authors’ ideas presented below.

You need to:

- Consider the ideas and details from the play and character analysis you completed.
- Carefully consider your controlling idea or how you will create a strong unifying effect in your response. Organize your discussion so that your ideas are clearly and effectively presented.
- Make sure that the examples and details that you select are relevant and support your theme statement.
- Use your own experiences and/or observations to support your opinion.

Hand in all planning sheets with your essay.

Select ONE of the following topics for your essay. Indicate on your response which topic you have selected.

CHOICE A

After Dracula's last attack on Lucy, Harker says to Van Helsing:

Harker: God must have sent you here to help us. Without you there'd be no hope. And this morning, Professor, when you opened your veins to revive Lucy again ...

Van Helsing provides the knowledge, wisdom and a strong will to battle Dracula. He needs all three traits to fight the vampire. When is each trait especially important in the struggle against Dracula?

What is your opinion of the idea that an individual can provide hope to us in threatening circumstances

CHOICE B

Lucy asks that her father, Van Helsing and Harker act in a certain way to defend her against Dracula.

Lucy: You must destroy him if you can, but with pity in your hearts, not rage and vengeance. That poor soul who has done so much evil needs our prayers more than any other.

"Dracula" is a play that examines the idea of good struggling against evil. Individuals are often challenged to act with integrity even if revenge would feel better. How is this theme examined in "Dracula"?

What is your opinion of the idea that we must act ethically even against those we consider to be dangerous and cruel?

ENGL 10-2

NAME:

DRACULA UNIT EXAM

PART I – VOCABULARY (10 marks)

The following sentences are based on the play. Decide which word best fits each blank. No words will be repeated.

occult

cunning

loathing

posterity

lair

wolfsbane

medieval moratorium

tapestries

incisive

entice

sanitarium

1. The action of the play takes place in Dr. Seward's _____, a place generally more restful than it is during the events of this drama.
2. The building is very old, dating back to _____ times, its wooden, paneled walls decorated with hanging _____.
3. Dr. Van Helsing has an alert manner and sharp _____ speech, always to the point.
4. Professor Van Helsing turns to the power of religion rather than the forces of the _____ to subdue Dracula.
5. Dracula conceals his _____ with great _____.
6. Count Dracula stares at the cross with _____.
7. Van Helsing's investigations win him a position that _____ will recognize.
8. The promise of insects to eat is enough to _____ Renfield to work for Dracula.

PART II – SHORT ANSWER (27 marks)

Answer the following questions in point form.

1. Count Dracula's home is in what area and what country? (2)
2. Which of the characters is a zoophagous, a life-eating maniac?
3. Who is the young man who is Lucy's betrothed?
4. What is the name of the young woman who has recently died from the same symptoms as Lucy?
5. What is the name of Dracula's English estate?
6. Who is from Holland, "the land of the tulip"?
7. What is the name of the plant used to keep away vampires?
8. What will KILL a vampire?
9. What is the name of the author of the NOVEL Dracula?
10. The plot takes place in what major European city?
11. What haunting sound can be heard every night?

12. What is Butterfield's responsibility?

13. What name does the newspaper give the mysterious lady who lures children with candy?

14. How many boxes of soil did Dracula bring with him to England?

15. What technological advancement made it possible for Dracula to travel to England?

16. How did Lucy attempt to hide the bite marks on her neck?

17. The two animal shapes that the vampire can assume are: (2)

18. What is Van Helsing's first name?

19. What is Lucy's last name?

20. A blood disease which leaves its victims pale and weak as a result of a deficiency of iron is:

21. Name 5 things that can be used to battle vampires: (5)

PART III – CHARACTER IDENTIFICATION (6 marks)

Choose SIX quotations and name the speaker of each.

1. "The master is angry. He promised me eternal life and live things, live things, big ones, not flies and spiders; and blood to drink, always blood."
2. "If you really love me, you'll tell me. Now don't turn away from me again."
3. "You made me promise that I wouldn't tell you... anything."
4. "I entered her tomb. I pried open the coffin. I found her there, sleeping, but not dead, not truly dead..."
5. "My lover, my father, my dear friend, you have sworn to save my soul. And now I am done with life. I cannot live on to become... what you know."
6. "I thank you for reminding me of the time."
7. "If we can keep him here till daybreak, he must collapse. And the stake and the hammer are ready. Here he is. Quickly!"
8. "Dawn. The ebb tide of life. I hate the dawn. How can people like the daylight? At night I really am alive."

PART IV – Reading Comprehension (11 marks)

Read the excerpt from Monkeyshines and answer questions 1 to 11 on this page. Circle the BEST answer.

1. The phrase “urban paranoia” (introduction) means fear associated with
 - a. cities
 - b. old age
 - c. loneliness
 - d. single status

2. Dorothy’s hesitation in answering the door (lines 5-9) results from her
 - a. concern that her hair will be damaged
 - b. awareness of her appearance
 - c. preoccupation with skipping
 - d. fear of strangers

3. The word “confront” in the stage direction “She must confront the plant” (lines 50-51) suggests that Dorothy will
 - a. remove the plant from her home
 - b. graciously accept the thoughtful gift
 - c. call the delivery person immediately
 - d. accept the challenge of dealing with the plant

4. The mother and daughter exchange in lines 67 to 73 suggest that Dorothy’s main concern at the moment is with her
 - a. exercise routine
 - b. speaker telephone
 - c. hearing difficulties
 - d. daughter’s exasperation

5. The misunderstandings that develop during the telephone conversation (lines 79 to 101) serve to
 - a. create humour
 - b. establish setting
 - c. achieve mystery
 - d. develop suspense

6. Dorothy's reference to Ellie as "your brother's wife" (lines 126 and 130) suggests that the relationship between Dorothy and Ellie is
- close
 - strained
 - supportive
 - unpredictable
7. The underlying reason that Dorothy describes her former classmates as "baked apples" (line 141) is her
- unstable family relationships
 - frustration with her physical appearance
 - distress at not recognizing her classmates
 - concern about the decline in her classmates' mental abilities
8. This scene suggests that Dorothy reacts to her class reunion by attempting to
- organize her life
 - ignore her birthdays
 - rejuvenate her appearance
 - stay in touch with friends
9. Dorothy's tone in her final speech (lines 151-159) indicates mainly that she is
- worried about her hair
 - impatient with her daughter
 - depressed about her situation
 - concerned about locating her glasses
10. The statement that most vividly reveals Dorothy's attitude toward aging is
- "Would that it were" (line 68)
 - "I've mislaid my glasses and cant read the card" (line 114)
 - "I'm taking leftovers" (line 146)
 - My hair is as strong as binder twine" (line 152)
11. Throughout the excerpt, Dorothy's responses to Nancy's questions suggest that she considers her daughter to be
- devoted and reliable
 - practical and unconcerned
 - critical and uncooperative
 - well-meaning but interfering

III. Questions / to // in your Questions Booklet are based on this excerpt from a play.

from MONKEYSHINES¹

DOROTHY BARTLETT is an energetic, attractive woman in her 60s. Her children have grown and left home, and two years ago her husband died. Superficially, she displays a breezy acceptance of her lot, but underneath she is struggling to come to terms with her past, her present, and her vague and lonesome future. NANCY BARTLETT, DOROTHY's unmarried daughter, lives in Boston where she has developed a mild case of urban paranoia. She tends to be overanxious about her mother.

As the scene opens, DOROTHY is striving to battle the signs of aging through dyeing her hair and exercising.

- 5 DOROTHY (Doggedly skipping rope): ... 86 ... 87 ... (The malfunctioning doorbell stutters out a feeble, crickety chirp. Then another. DOROTHY pauses, not sure if she heard something. She continues to rotate the skip rope in one hand, still counting.) ... 88 ... 89 ... 90 ... (Moves to check her oven timer, concerned for the dye on her hair) No ... I didn't think it would be time yet ... (Resumes skipping. A firm, determined knocking at the front door stops her dead. She looks from the door to herself, dismayed at the idea of anybody seeing her like this.) Ooooh no ... who in the world ... ? (The knocking is repeated.)
- 10 DELIVERY PERSON: Anybody home?!
- DOROTHY (Flustered): No! Uh ... I mean ... who is it?
- DELIVERY PERSON: Delivery.
- DOROTHY: If it's the groceries, just leave them outside the kitchen door.
- DELIVERY PERSON: It's not groceries. It's "Tuneful Blooms."
- 15 DOROTHY (Mishearing): "Tuneful Tombs"?
- DELIVERY PERSON (Shouts): BLOOMS! Flowers. Shrubs, Lawn Elves, Pink Flamingoes. "Everything to furnish the garden of your heart."
- DOROTHY: I didn't order anything for "the garden of my heart."
- DELIVERY PERSON: Are you Mrs. Dorothy Bartlett?
- 20 DOROTHY: Yes. (Mutters) For my sins ...
- DELIVERY PERSON: It's for you.
- DOROTHY: Hold on. (She starts for the door, but catches a glimpse of herself in the mirror and decides extreme measures are called for, and ducks behind the coat-closet door. Calls) Come in. It's open.

Continued

¹Monkeyshines—(slang) playful mischief

DOROTHY (Flinches): Why not? It's not painful. (Turns it down as she rubs an ear) Not to you anyway.

65 NANCY: You wander away—

DOROTHY: Fiddlesticks . . . (Wanders away to retrieve her skip rope) I don't . . .

- NANCY: I can't hear half what you say. It's like talking to thin air.

DOROTHY (Pinches her midriff): Would that it were . . .

NANCY: Please sit down and talk to me.

70 DOROTHY (Positions herself near the speaker and resumes skipping): If I sit down, I'll never get up. And I'm not far from 100. (Counting) 91 . . . 92 . . .

- NANCY: Momma, you're decades away from 100.

DOROTHY: Skips, baby. Not years. (Eyes the plant) Nancy, somebody just 75 walked in the front door and—

NANCY: Oh. You have company?

DOROTHY: Company? Me? (Finishes skipping and begins a new exercise) I never set eyes on the person before—

NANCY (Apprehensive): A stranger? Just walked in?

80 DOROTHY: Yes, With a . . . a . . .

NANCY (Worried): With a what, Momma?

DOROTHY (Searching for words): I . . . I can only call it a . . .

NANCY (Completely misunderstanding): Momma, stay calm!

DOROTHY: I'm calm, Nancy. But I don't know what to make of it.

85 NANCY: Let me handle this. (Blusters through the speaker) Now listen to me, whoever you are. I'm hanging up right now and calling the police. And you'd better—

DOROTHY (Begins to understand and is amused): Nancy, what good will that do? You're in Boston.

90 NANCY (Panicky): Momma! Don't tell him that! (To the imagined intruder) Now hear this. I'm calling long distance so you'd better clear off.

DOROTHY (To the cactus): Get that, ya big lug?

NANCY: Momma, don't antagonize him.

DOROTHY: Honey, baby, there's nobody here.

95 NANCY: He's threatening you, isn't he? Does he have a weapon?

DOROTHY (Breaking up): He has thorns. They both have thorns.

NANCY: What? Thorns . . . ? Omigod . . . did you say both?!

DOROTHY: Nancy . . . Nancy . . . I'm okay. I'm fine. There's nobody. You've lived too long in the city. I got a little paranoid myself when we used to live

100 in New York.

NANCY: Momma, what are you talking about?

Continued

NANCY: No entrée?

DOROTHY: Not the food. The people. We looked like a bunch of old baked apples.

145 NANCY: Baked apples are nice. Hot and steamy—

DOROTHY: Nobody I saw was that. I'm talking leftovers. Skin all puckered and all the sweet goody run to . . . the bottom. So that's why I've got to take you off the speaker, baby. (Speaks into the receiver) I need one ear to listen for the oven timer.

150 NANCY: What's cooking?

DOROTHY: My head. I'm coloring my hair . . . no, I won't leave it on too long . . . no . . . Nancy! My hair is as strong as binder twine. It won't fall out. (A dinging sound) There! That'll be the timer. Got to dash—What? Look in the freezer for what? . . . Nancy, don't be silly. Why would my glasses be in the freezer? . . . They were in my snow boot because they fell out of a pocket. They couldn't fall into the freezer unless they fell up . . . yes, baby, I will lock the door before I shower. I saw *Psycho*⁴ . . . Nancy! I use the non-skid mat! . . . kiss-kiss to you too, honey. (Hangs up) She couldn't have got that hectoring⁵ quality from me . . .

Suzanne Finlay

Contemporary Canadian playwright

She has worked as an actress, play editor, CBC-TV story editor, playwrights' agent, and television writer.

⁴*Psycho*—An Alfred Hitchcock movie in which a woman is murdered in the shower

⁵hectoring—nagging

ENGL 10-2

DRACULA UNIT EXAM

NAME:

KEY

54

PART I – VOCABULARY (10 marks)

The following sentences are based on the play. Decide which word best fits each blank. No words will be repeated.

occult

cunning

loathing

posterity

lair

wolfsbane

medieval

moratorium

tapestries

incisive

entice

sanitarium

1. The action of the play takes place in Dr. Seward's Sanitarium, a place generally more restful than it is during the events of this drama.

2. The building is very old, dating back to medieval times, its wooden, paneled walls decorated with hanging tapestries.

3. Dr. Van Helsing has an alert manner and sharp incisive speech, always to the point.

4. Professor Van Helsing turns to the power of religion rather than the forces of the occult to subdue Dracula.

5. Dracula conceals his lair with great cunning.

6. Count Dracula stares at the cross with loathing.

7. Van Helsing's investigations win him a position that posterity will recognize.

8. The promise of insects to eat is enough to entice Renfield to work for Dracula.

10

PART II – SHORT ANSWER (27 marks)

Answer the following questions in point form.

1. Count Dracula's home is in what area and what country? (2)

Transylvania, Romania

2. Which of the characters is a zoophagous, a life-eating maniac?

Rentfield

3. Who is the young man who is Lucy's betrothed?

Jonathan Harker

4. What is the name of the young woman who has recently died from the same symptoms as Lucy?

Mina

5. What is the name of Dracula's English estate?

Carfax

6. Who is from Holland, "the land of the tulip"?

Van Helsing

7. What is the name of the plant used to keep away vampires?

Wolfsbane

8. What will KILL a vampire?

Stake through the heart

9. What is the name of the author of the NOVEL Dracula?

Bram Stoker

10. The plot takes place in what major European city?

London

11. What haunting sound can be heard every night?

Wolfs howling

12. What is Butterfield's responsibility?

Attendant (looking after Renfield)

13. What name does the newspaper give the mysterious lady who lures children with candy?

"Hampstead Horror" (1)

"Lady in White" (0.3)

14. How many boxes of soil did Dracula bring with him to England?

Six

15. What technological advancement made it possible for Dracula to travel to England?

Planes (flight)

16. How did Lucy attempt to hide the bite marks on her neck?

Scarf

17. The two animal shapes that the vampire can assume are: (2)

→ Bat

→ Wolf

18. What is Van Helsing's first name?

Abraham

19. What is Lucy's last name?

Seward

20. A blood disease which leaves its victims pale and weak as a result of a deficiency of iron is:

Anemia

21. Name 5 things that can be used to battle vampires: (5) / or that vampires hate

→ Wolfsbane

→ Communion/Host

→ Cross

→ Mirrors

→ Holy Water

→ Garlic

→ Sunlight

PART III – CHARACTER IDENTIFICATION (6 marks)

Choose SIX quotations and name the speaker of each.

1. "The master is angry. He promised me eternal life and live things, live things, big ones, not flies and spiders; and blood to drink, always blood."

Renfield

2. "Dawn. The ebb tide of life. I hate the dawn. How can people like the daylight? At night I really am alive."

Lucy

3. "If you really love me, you'll tell me. Now don't turn away from me again."

Lucy

4. "You made me promise that I wouldn't tell you... anything."

John Harker

5. "I entered her tomb. I pried open the coffin. I found her there, sleeping, but not dead, not truly dead..."

Van Helsing

6. "My lover, my father, my dear friend, you have sworn to save my soul. And now I am done with life. I cannot live on to become... what you know."

Lucy

7. "I thank you for reminding me of the time."

Dracula

8. "If we can keep him here till daybreak, he must collapse. And the stake and the hammer are ready. Here he is. Quickly!"

Van Helsing

PART III – CHARACTER IDENTIFICATION

Choose SIX quotations and name the speaker of

1. "The master is angry. He promised me et things, live things, big ones, not flies and to drink, always blood."

Renfield

2. "Dawn. The ebb tide of life. I hate the d people like the daylight? At night I reall

Lucy

3. "If you really love me, you'll tell me. Now don't turn away from me again."

Lucy

4. "You made me promise that I wouldn't tell you... anything."

John Harker

5. "I entered her tomb. I pried open the coffin. I found her there, sleeping, but not dead, not truly dead..."

Van Helsing

6. "My lover, my father, my dear friend, you have sworn to save my soul. And now I am done with life. I cannot live on to become... what you know."

Lucy

7. "I thank you for reminding me of the time."

Dracula

8. "If we can keep him here till daybreak, he must collapse. And the stake and the hammer are ready. Here he is. Quickly!"

Van Helsing

1) Renfield "The master is..."

2) Lucy "If you really love me..."

3) Harker "You made me promise..."

4) Van Helsing "I entered her tomb..."

5) Lucy "My lover..."

6) Dracula "I thank you for reminding..."

7) Van Helsing "If we can keep him here till daybreak..."

8) ~~Renfield~~ Lucy "Dawn the ebb..."

PART IV – Reading Comprehension (11 marks)

Read the excerpt from Monkeyshines and answer questions 1 to 11 on this page. Circle the BEST answer.

1. The phrase “urban paranoia” (introduction) means fear associated with
 - ☒ a. cities
 - b. old age
 - c. loneliness
 - d. single status

2. Dorothy’s hesitation in answering the door (lines 5-9) results from her
 - a. concern that her hair will be damaged
 - ☒ b. awareness of her appearance
 - c. preoccupation with skipping
 - d. fear of strangers

3. The word “confront” in the stage direction “She must confront the plant” (lines 50-51) suggests that Dorothy will
 - a. remove the plant from her home
 - b. graciously accept the thoughtful gift
 - c. call the delivery person immediately
 - ☒ d. accept the challenge of dealing with the plant

4. The mother and daughter exchange in lines 67 to 73 suggest that Dorothy’s main concern at the moment is with her
 - ☒ a. exercise routine
 - b. speaker telephone
 - c. hearing difficulties
 - d. daughter’s exasperation

5. The misunderstandings that develop during the telephone conversation (lines 79 to 101) serve to
 - ☒ a. create humour
 - b. establish setting
 - c. achieve mystery
 - d. develop suspense

6. Dorothy's reference to Ellie as "your brother's wife" (lines 126 and 130) suggests that the relationship between Dorothy and Ellie is

- a. close
- ☒ b. strained
- c. supportive
- d. unpredictable

7. The underlying reason that Dorothy describes her former classmates as "baked apples" (line 141) is her

- a. unstable family relationships
- ☒ b. frustration with her physical appearance
- c. distress at not recognizing her classmates
- d. concern about the decline in her classmates' mental abilities

8. This scene suggests that Dorothy reacts to her class reunion by attempting to

- a. organize her life
- b. ignore her birthdays
- ☒ c. rejuvenate her appearance
- d. stay in touch with friends

9. Dorothy's tone in her final speech (lines 151-159) indicates mainly that she is

- a. worried about her hair
- ☒ b. impatient with her daughter
- c. depressed about her situation
- d. concerned about locating her glasses

10. The statement that most vividly reveals Dorothy's attitude toward aging is

- a. "Would that it were" (line 68)
- b. "I've mislaid my glasses and can't read the card" (line 114)
- ☒ c. "I'm taking leftovers" (line 146)
- d. "My hair is as strong as binder twine" (line 152)

11. Throughout the excerpt, Dorothy's responses to Nancy's questions suggest that she considers her daughter to be

- a. devoted and reliable
- b. practical and unconcerned
- c. critical and uncooperative
- ☒ d. well-meaning but interfering